

Tenure-track Assistant Professor of Sociology & Ethnic Studies Latina/o Immigration

The Sociology Department and the Institute for Ethnic Studies (IES) at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln invite applications for a tenure-track Assistant Professor position with a focus on Latina/o immigration, as part of a cluster hire, to begin August 2018. This position will have Full-Time Equivalent (FTE) apportionments of .60 Sociology and .40 Institute for Ethnic Studies. Minimum qualifications include a PhD or equivalent in Sociology or a related field and a record of achievement in scholarship. Ideally, candidates will have strengths in demography or health disparities and will show potential to complement Sociology Department teaching and research strengths in families, health, inequality, social networks, or research methods. Applicants interested in applying their expertise to immigration in the Midwest and Great Plains are especially encouraged to apply. Responsibilities include maintaining an active program of research and contributing to the teaching and engagement missions of both units. We are strongly committed to diversity and inclusion. Thus, we actively encourage applicants from groups underrepresented in higher education. Learn more about the Sociology Department at <http://soc.unl.edu/> or contact the department through socsearch2017@unl.edu or call Lori Ratzlaff at 402-472-3631.

Review of applications will begin October 16, 2017 and continue until the position is filled. Applicants should go to <http://employment.unl.edu> and search for requisition F_170075. Click “Apply for this Job” and complete the Faculty/Academic Administrative Form. Attach the following: 1) a cover letter addressed to Prof. Regina Werum, Search Committee Chair, with a detailed description of how your research and teaching interests match the job description and department needs, 2) curriculum vitae, 3) research and teaching statements and 4) a sample publication. You may need to combine documents when uploading. You will also need to have three references send letters to socsearch2017@unl.edu, addressed to Prof. Regina Werum.
